Bush Moves to Cut Oil Prices

Plan would ease environment rules, revoke big-oil tax break

WASHINGTON | Under election-year pressure to reduce surging gasoline prices, President Bush on Tuesday halted filling of the nation's emergency oil reserve, urged the waiver of clean air rules to ease local gas shortages and called for the repeal of $2 billion in tax breaks for profit-heavy oil companies.

Still, experts said Bush's actions wouldn't have much impact on prices at the pump. The president warned that motorists would have to dig deep into their pockets all summer long.

Bush urged lawmakers to expand tax breaks for the purchase of fuel-efficient hybrid automobiles, a politically popular measure that's also supported by environmentalists. He also directed the Environmental Protection Agency to use its authority to temporarily waive air quality laws in states if that would relieve a local gasoline supply shortage.

The White House was unable to say how much Bush's actions could affect the price of gas.

Bush said, "Every little bit helps."

Democrats, eager to blame Republicans for high gas costs ahead of November's congressional elections, said Bush has had five years to find a way to lower prices and has favored big oil companies over consumers.

Bush, a former oilman, asked his administration to investigate possible price gouging and said Congress should revoke about $2 billion in tax breaks for the nation's largest oil and gas companies, which Congress approved and he signed into law to encourage exploration. NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

DISGUISES

Caught in Tape

A man robbed a Slippery Rock Township, Pa., ice cream store while wearing duct tape on his face to conceal his identity, police said. Police on Sunday charged Joshua S. Sunday, 23, of Porterville, with robbing a Dairy Queen on Friday. The man acted like he had a gun under his shirt and got away with about $500, police said.

Police said there were three similar robberies at 7-Eleven stores on Friday, though no charges were filed for those incidents. The man who robbed those three stores also wore duct tape to cover his face. Witnesses told police that the robber apologized, saying he took the money because he had bills to pay. (AP)

Lawmakers May Target Oil Industry

Amid record profits, energy firms are likely to take political hits

WASHINGTON | The country's three largest oil and gas companies are expected to report combined first-quarter profits this week in excess of $16 billion, a 19 percent surge from last year that is sure to complicate life for the industry in Washington, where elected officials are scrambling for ways to assuage angry consumers and businesses.

President Bush on Tuesday gave the Environmental Protection Agency the authority to temporarily waive regional clean-fuel regulations to promote greater gasoline-supply flexibility, but members of Congress have other ideas. Some are renewing calls for a windfall profits tax and some want federal regulators to investigate industry consolidation. Still others are threatening hearings and expressing outrage at how the industry invests cautiously in new refining capacity yet rewards its executives lavishly.

"These members of Congress are fit to be tied," said Paul Cicio, executive director of the Industrial Energy Consumers of Americas.

The combined earnings expected from ConocoPhillips, Exxon

Mobil Corp. and Chevron Corp. will be 14 times greater than the combined first-quarter profits of Google Inc., Apple Computer Inc. and Oracle Corp.

"That level of profit is not justifiable," said Tyson Slocum, a consumer advocate and energy expert at Public Citizen.

But with world oil prices trading around $72 a barrel, analysts say full-year profits for the oil majors are likely to surpass the record-setting earnings of 2005, when Exxon reported a $36.13 billion profit — the highest ever for a U.S. company.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, said more hearings are necessary to determine how oil companies invest their profits. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said a windfall profits tax may be necessary and that any future consolidation in the industry deserves more scrutiny. Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has asked the Federal Trade Commission to monitor refiners this summer.

The consternation in Washington about persistently high energy prices and soaring industry profits is not simply a matter of looking out for the little guy, analysts said. With mid-term elections coming up in November, members of Congress must also look out for themselves.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. | A federal jury on Tuesday convicted a 23-year-old man of supporting terrorists by attending an al Qaeda training camp in Pakistan three years ago.

Hamid Hayat, a seasonal farm worker in Lodi, an agricultural town south of Sacramento, was convicted of one count of providing material support to terrorists and three counts of lying to the FBI.

His attorney said she would seek a new trial. "Hamid Hayat never attended a terrorist training camp. This fight is not over," Wazhma Mojaddidi said.

The verdict came hours after a separate jury hearing a case against the man's father deadlocked, forcing the judge to declare a mistrial.

The father, 48-year-old ice cream truck driver Umer Hayat, is charged with two counts of lying to the FBI about his son's involvement in the training camp. Lawyers will meet in court May 5 to decide whether he will be retried. (AP)

Port Plan Targets Workers

Employees to undergo background checks in new security measures

WASHINGTON | Seaport workers will undergo background checks for links to terrorism and to ensure they are legal U.S. residents, the Bush administration said Tuesday.

The announcement came after months of scathing criticism about security gaps at ports.

The heightened scrutiny — which will begin immediately — drew praise from some lawmakers and port associations that said the checks were long overdue. Others jeered the security measures as either too weak or too invasive of workers' privacy rights.

Names of an estimated 400,000 employees who work in the most sensitive areas of ports will be matched against government terror watch lists and immigration databases, Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff said. They will be among roughly 750,000 workers — including truckers and rail employees — who have unrestricted access to ports and will be required to carry tamper-resistant identification cards by next year.

"What this will do is it will elevate security at our ports themselves so that we can be sure that those who enter our ports to do business come for legitimate reasons and not in order to do us harm," Chertoff said. He called the safeguards part of a "ring of security" around U.S. ports.

The background checks will not examine workers' criminal history, although Chertoff left open that possibility for the future.

How much the background checks will cost was not available.

The Bush administration has been under fire for months for what critics call holes in security measures at ports, which were highlighted after a Dubai company's purchase of a British firm gave it control of six American ports.

Police Find Man's Body in Pa. Landfill

Remains believed to be linked to missing N.J. college student

TULLYTOWN, PA. | The remains of a white man were found Tuesday in a Pennsylvania landfill where authorities have been searching for the body of a missing college student, police said.

New Jersey state police said they had made an important discovery at the landfill, where for the past three weeks officials have been searching for John Fiocco Jr., a freshman at The College of New Jersey.

Capt. Al Della Fave said there had been a "significant development" but would not disclose any further information.

The Times of Trenton, citing unnamed law enforcement sources on its Web site, said Fiocco's body had been found. Authorities had been searching the Tullytown, Pa., landfill, which receives trash from the school's campus in nearby Ewing, since April 1. Investigators had been combing the garbage for evidence, including Fiocco's body.

Fiocco, 19, was last seen in the early morning of March 25 after returning to his dormitory from an off-campus party. His roommate reported him missing to campus police about 36 hours later.

Police believe the landfill receives trash from Fiocco's dorm. (AP)

Study: Uninsured Workers Increase

41 percent of people with middle incomes lack health coverage

NEW YORK | The percentage of working-age Americans with moderate to middle incomes who lacked health insurance for at least part of the year rose to 41 percent in 2005, a dramatic increase from the 28 percent in 2001 without coverage, a study released on Wednesday found.

Moreover, more than half of the uninsured adults said they were having problems paying their medical bills or had incurred debt to cover their expenses, according to a report by the Commonwealth Fund, a New York-based private, health care policy foundation. The study of 4,350 adults also found that people without insurance were more likely to forgo recommended health screenings such as mammograms than those with coverage, and were less likely to have a regular doctor than their insured counterparts.

The report paints a bleak health care picture for the uninsured. "It represents an explosion of the insurance crisis into those with moderate incomes," said Sara Collins, a senior program officer at the Commonwealth Fund.

Collins said the study also illustrates how more employers are dropping coverage or are offering plans that are just too expensive for many people.

About 45.8 million Americans did not have health insurance in 2004, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The percentage of individuals earning less than $20,000 a year without insurance rose to 53 percent, up from 49 percent in 2001. Overall, the percentage of people without insurance rose to 28 percent in 2005 from 24 percent in 2001. TERESA AGOVINO (AP)

Airlines Balk at Safeguards for Flu Epidemics

WASHINGTON | Concerned about bird flu, federal health officials want airlines to collect personal information about domestic and international passengers to help track a potential epidemic.

Financially strapped airlines say creating such a database would impose staggering new costs.

The CDC wants to be able to easily find, notify and recommend treatment to airline passengers who have been exposed to bird flu as well as such diseases as plague, dengue fever or SARS — even if the travelers' symptoms don't appear while they're traveling.

Health officials are especially concerned about a flu pandemic. Though bird flu hasn't spread from human to human, they fear it could mutate into a strain that does.

The CDC plan calls for airlines to ask passengers their full name and address, emergency contact numbers and detailed flight information. (AP)

30 Arrests in Egypt Blasts

Tourists flee as radical Muslim groups swiftly condemn deadly attack

DAHAB, EGYPT | Egyptian authorities, already struggling with elusive terror cells in the rugged Sinai Peninsula, moved quickly Tuesday — arresting 30 men in the triple bombings that ripped apart a crowded resort town, killing 24 on a tranquil holiday evening.

Radical Muslim groups moved just as rapidly to distance themselves from the Dahab attacks. The leader of Egypt's banned Muslim Brotherhood condemned them as "aggression on human souls created by God."

Monday's blasts were so powerful that police divers worked Tuesday to retrieve body parts from the shallow waters of the sea.

The militant Palestinian Hamas organization called the blasts a "criminal attack ... against all human values."

Many frightened tourists fled Sinai coastal resorts where two previous bomb attacks — like the Dahab blasts — bore the hallmarks of al Qaeda-linked groups that appear to have a free hand to continue operations in the barren peninsula.

Egyptian authorities — despite hundreds of arrests after each previous Sinai attack — appeared increasingly frustrated by the ease with which terrorists continue to hit the country's vital tourism industry.

"This incident is addressed to the whole of Egypt, there is no reason for it other than an attempt to destroy the economy of Egypt by attacking tourism," said Prime Minister Ahmed Nazif. (AP)

Canada Bans Coverage of War Dead

TORONTO | Canada's new Conservative government barred the media from covering the return Tuesday of the flag-draped coffins of four soldiers killed in Afghanistan, angering opponents and some families.

The government also has stopped lowering flags to half-staff outside Parliament each time a Canadian soldier is killed, prompting Liberals to accuse Prime Minister Stephen Harper of trying to play down the growing human cost of the Canadian mission in Afghanistan. Fifteen Canadians have been killed.

The media learned Monday that they would be barred from the evening ceremony, a decision that mirrors Bush administration policy blocking media coverage of the coffins of slain service members arriving in the United States.

Like the Pentagon, Canadian Defense Minister Gordon O'Connor cited privacy concerns as a reason for the media ban. He also said the Conservatives were returning to an 80-year-old tradition of honoring fallen soldiers by only lowering the flag on Parliament Hill once a year, on Nov. 11, Remembrance Day. (AP)

Terror leader mocks new Iraqi government, warns of more attacks

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Terror mastermind Abu Musab al-Zarqawi made a dramatic and unprecedented appearance on a video Tuesday, dismissing the new Iraqi government as an American "stooge" and a "poisoned dagger" in the heart of the Muslim world. He also warned of more attacks to come.

The video — the first released by al-Zarqawi showing his face — was posted on the Internet only days after a breakthrough in Iraq's political process allowing its Shiite, Sunni and Kurdish leaders to start putting together a government.

It also came only two days after al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden, to whom the Jordanian-born al-Zarqawi has sworn allegiance, released an audiotape calling on Muslims to resist what he called the West's war on Islam.

The message appeared to be an attempt by al-Zarqawi, the head of al Qaeda in Iraq, to rally Iraqis and foreign fighters to his side and show his strength at a time when U.S. and Iraqi officials are touting political progress as a setback to insurgents.

Any new government — whether made up of the hated Shiites or the secular Zionist Kurds or the collaborators imposed on the Sunnis — will be stooges of the Crusaders and will be a poisoned dagger in the heart of the Islamic nation," al-Zarqawi said. LEE KEATH (AP)

At Trial, Wife Recounts Attack With Gas, Fire

Woman says husband wanted to 'fry' her after she rejected him

UPPER MARLBORO, MD. | A woman who was doused with gasoline and set on fire showed jurors her scars and recounted the attack Tuesday in the trial of her estranged husband, who is charged with attempted murder and assault.

Yvette Cade did not flinch and the jury looked on intently, observers said, as she removed her jacket, pulled up her pantlegs and took off a knit cap — displaying the puckered, damaged skin on her chest, arms, back, hands and legs.

In an hour and 45 minutes on the witness stand, Cade testified that Roger B. Hargrave, 34, called her at home 15 times on the morning before the Oct. 10 attack, asking her to reconcile. When she refused, he warned her that he would "fry me like Crisco grease," she said.

Later that day, Cade testified, Hargrave confronted her while she was working at a T-Mobile store in Clinton, poured gasoline from a soda bottle on her and chased her outside. She fell, and the next thing she knew, she was on fire. (AP)

Existing Home Sales Rise Slightly

WASHINGTON | Sales of previously owned homes edged up in March, but the backlog of unsold homes still hit a record high, raising concerns that the once-booming housing market could be in for a rougher landing than expected.

The National Association of Realtors reported Tuesday that sales of existing homes advanced by a tiny 0.3 percent in March compared with February, rising to a seasonally adjusted annual sales rate of 6.92 million units.

The median price of a new home rose to $218,000 last month. Analysts predicted that home prices will come under more pressure in coming months if sales slow more and the inventory of unsold homes keeps rising.

The number of unsold homes on the market at the end of March hit a record of 3.19 million units. At the March sales pace, it would take 5.5 months to eliminate the backlog of unsold homes, the longest period since 5.6 months in July 1998. (AP)

Arrington Fires Shots at Redskins

Star linebacker ready for a fresh start after signing with Giants

FOOTBALL | LaVar Arrington's career with the New York Giants got off to a less than auspicious start this week when his car broke down on the trip north from Virginia.

The three-time Pro Bowl linebacker took it as a sign.

"That might be an omen that I need to leave whatever I brought from there and just start completely over," Arrington said Tuesday in an obvious reference to his turmoil-filled final two seasons with the Washington Redskins.

The positive spin was an indication of Arrington's mindset as he made his first public remarks since agreeing to a seven-year, $49 million deal with the Giants over the weekend. Other clues lay in the veiled jabs he took at his former team.

"I feel rejuvenated," he told a swarm of reporters in the Giants locker room in between weight training sessions. "I didn't know that you could step into a football building and feel this comfortable. Everybody's speaking to one another, people treat each other like men. That wasn't my reality for so long. It's about football here, not politics."

Arrington's signing brought an end to an extended courtship period in which it seemed the seven-year veteran might not land with any team after he agreed to a contract buyout with the Redskins in early March.

Arrington said Tuesday he was merely taking his time through the free-agent process. He also defended himself against charges that he was benched for not playing with assistant coach Gregg Williams' defensive system.

"Nobody makes it in the NFL just freelancing," he said. "I don't know what freelancing is. If I'm on one side of the ball and I see a play and have an opportunity to analyze it, I'll try to make the play. Maybe that's where it came from. I'm a very coachable individual, I feel I'm a pleasant individual to be around, so where all those things got started I have no idea."

Luol Deng and the Chicago Bulls are down 2-0 in a series vs. the Miami Heat.

Bulls Are Down, But Not Out

Chicago hopes it can overcome history in series against Miami

NBA PLAYOFFS | Luol Deng drove the baseline for a vicious two-handed reverse dunk. Then, Andres Nocioni threw down a one-hander.

Practice was over, no one was guarding them.

And a 7-foot-1, 319-pound obstacle named Shaquille O'Neal was nowhere in sight Tuesday, which might have explained the smiles.

Down 2-0 to Miami, the Bulls appeared loose as this first-round playoff series shifts to Chicago for Games 3 and 4 Thursday and Sunday. "We're down, but we don't feel like we're out of it," Deng said.

"Everybody in this building knows that the series isn't over," said Kirk Hinrich, who scored 29 points in Monday's 115-108 loss.

The Bulls learned how fragile a 2-0 lead can be last season, when the Washington Wizards rallied to win their first-round series in six games. "We learned how long a series is," Hinrich said. "Obviously, the series isn't over when you're down two games. They held their home court and we have to do the same." (AP)

NFL

Williams Benched for Drugs

Miami Dolphins running back Ricky Williams was suspended for the 2006 season by the NFL on Tuesday for violating the league's substance abuse policy for the fourth time. The league announced the suspension after Williams' appeal of his latest positive drug test was denied. The test apparently involved a drug other than marijuana, which Williams acknowledged using before. (AP)

Eskandarian In Fine Mess Over Spit

UNITED | Major League Soccer fined D.C. United forward Alecko Eskandarian $250 Tuesday for his post-goal celebration in last weekend's game against New York, when he mocked his opponent by taking a mouthful of the club's namesake Red Bull energy drink and spitting it out.

The league's disciplinary committee issued the fine "for inappropriate conduct in the 42nd minute" of Saturday's game, which D.C. won 4-1.

Eskandarian, who missed much of last season with a concussion suffered in a collision with New England Revolution goalkeeper Matt Reis, scored two goals in the game and was selected MLS Player of the Week on Monday.

After scoring his first goal, Eskandarian ran to the D.C. bench where he caught a can of Red Bull tossed to him by teammate Jamil Walker, opened it, took a mouthful and then spit it out — on national television.

After Saturday's game, Eskandarian said he meant the celebration as a "joke" and did not mean to offend Red Bull Co. Ltd., the Red Bulls or their fans. (AP)

Minor league baseball umpires walk the picket line on Tuesday in Hagerstown, Md.

Umps Join Forces For Higher Wages

Major league officials go to bat for striking minor league referees

HAGERSTOWN, MD. | Twelve hours earlier, umpire Dan Iassogna was calling balls and strikes on Alfonso Soriano at RFK Stadium.

On Tuesday morning, Iassogna carried a picket sign and chanted with 24 other umpires outside Municipal Stadium, shortly before a Class A game between the Hagerstown Suns and Lake County Captains. "Being here is something I want to do, something I have to do," he said.

Major league umpires like Iassogna joined striking minor league umps on the picket line in a joint demonstration, "the first of its kind in 100 years of baseball," according to Andy Roberts, president of the Association of Minor League Umpires.

The strike began on March 24. The 220 minor league umps around the country are seeking higher salaries and an increase in meal money. The average salary for Triple-A umps is $15,000, with a per diem of $25.

Minor league games are currently being umpired by crews with varying experience; the majority are accustomed to working high school and college games.

Negotiators for the striking umps are scheduled to meet with minor league baseball officials and a federal mediator Wednesday and Thursday in Cincinnati. (AP)

Mavs' Johnson Named Top Coach

Former point guard wins honor in first full season leading Dallas

NBA | During Avery Johnson's playing days, many executives and players thought the point guard would make a great NBA coach. Still, he had to be convinced it was time to make that transition.

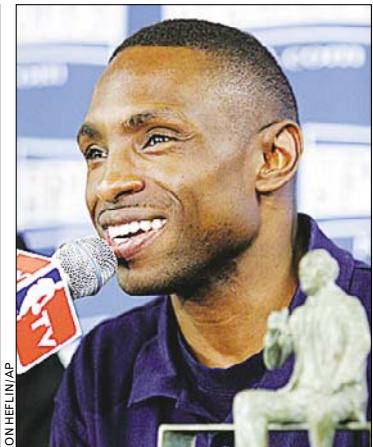

Now, after his first full season leading the Dallas Mavericks, Johnson was honored Tuesday as the NBA coach of the year.

Mavericks owner Mark Cuban remembers talking to Johnson nearly two years ago about retiring as a player and becoming the top assistant — and eventual successor — to Don Nelson.

Cuban told Johnson, "I know you can still play, but we want to start you on the path to being a Hall of Fame coach." Johnson's response then, "I don't know, I don't know."

There's no more doubt. Johnson is a coaching natural.

Johnson led the Mavericks to 60 victories this season, matching the team record for wins. That mark was first set three years ago, when Johnson was still playing for Dallas.

"I think I'm gifted to do what I'm doing, that this is what I'm here for," Johnson said. "I felt like a coach when I was a player. ... In a lot of ways, I know some things are still new to me. But in other ways, I just feel like I've been doing this a lot of time, and a lot of it just comes naturally."

Another UConn Star Heads to NBA

Vouyoukas, a junior, and Gibson, a sophomore, left open the possibility of returning for another season by not hiring an agent.

Williams will forgo his final year of eligibility, becoming the third UConn underclassman this year to leave early. He joins junior forward Josh Boone and sophomore swingman Rudy Gay, who declared this month. Boone said he won't hire an agent.

The deadline to declare for the June 28 draft is Saturday. (AP)

Little E gives his car a paint job to honor his late father's birthday

AUTO RACING | The one thing a NASCAR driver never wanted to see was the black No. 3 Chevrolet closing on his rear bumper. One glance of the car in the rearview mirror was enough to send tremors through any competitor.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. hopes to achieve that same effect this weekend at Talladega Superspeedway, where he'll mark his late father's birthday by driving a replica of the famed car.

Junior's trademark red Chevy will be painted predominantly black. Junior will still use his No. 8 — his father's No. 3 has not been on the track since his 2001 death. "The car looks good, it's a cool way to honor my dad," Earnhardt said Tuesday.

The tribute is part of a larger salute at Dale Earnhardt Inc., which is celebrating Earnhardt's Thursday night induction into the Motorsports Hall of Fame, his overall accomplishments at Talladega and his 55th birthday, which would have been Saturday. JENNA FRYER (AP)

What the Kids Want

Disney's story of star-crossed young love is a runaway hit

PHENOMENA | The most he and his colleagues were expecting to do with "High School Musical," a song-and-dance romance that Disney executive Gary Marsh described as "Grease' meets 'Romeo and Juliet,'" was create a hit movie for kids.

What they did instead was unleash one of the biggest U.S. children's-television phenomenons since Fess Parker pulled on a coonskin cap in the 1950s.

When "High School Musical" debuted on the Disney Channel on Jan. 20, it drew nearly eight million U.S. viewers, making it the top-rated basic-cable TV show that week. When it was repeated the next night, it was the No. 2-rated cable show of the week.

Then it got bigger.

The broadcast of a karaoke version was also a hit, and in March three videos from the movie were among the 12 most-popular downloads at the Apple iTunes Music Store.

The movie soundtrack, meanwhile, reached No. 10 on the U.S. Billboard pop-music charts two weeks after its release, hit No. 1 four weeks later and, after sliding down to No. 3, returned to the top spot again. At one point there were nine singles from the soundtrack on the chart in the same week.

Plans for the sequel are already in the works. The DVD of the original will be released next month along with "High School Musical — the Novel." Also, a stage show is in the works and a touring concert version is a possibility.

What is all the fuss about?

In "High School Musical," basketball star Troy (Zac Efron), meets Vanessa Anne Hudgens' "brainiac," Gabriella, at a singing event and they establish an immediate musical and romantic connection.

Troy and Gabriella are soon trying out for the lead parts in their high-school musical. Their efforts are almost derailed by their separate groups of friends, who want Troy to concentrate on leading the basketball team to a championship and Gabriella to focus on bringing the school another academic title.

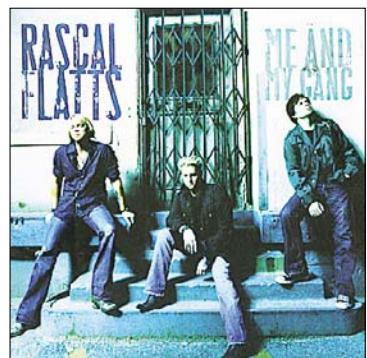

Everyone eventually gets on the same page, uniting against Troy and Gabriella's true enemies, while singing and dancing pretty much every step of the way.

As "Musical" is a Disney film, it can be safely assumed that things will work out for the pair by the time they hit their last notes.

Fake It Till You Make It

Rascal Flatts rule the charts, but they aren't 'real country'

MUSIC | The way Rascal Flatts has gone about its business has not resulted in the awards and recognition that have come to similarly successful acts, but the group nonetheless has been one of the most formidable country chart mainstays over the past five years. It looks to maintain that standing with the easily digestible "Me and My Gang" (Lyric Street Records), which continues the trio's practice of boiling down uncomplicated themes into pop formulas built around hooks and plentiful sheen.

Rascal Flatts' new record is currently at the very peak of the Billboard Top 200.

Arrangements on the set consistently evoke country as they swirl together fiddles and heavy doses of pedal steel guitar in tunes such as the manicured ballad "What Hurts the Most." Whether the glossy reminiscence on young love in "Cool Thing," or a swelled showcase for singer Gary LeVox in "Stand," the songs are invariably slick, manicured lite-rock, all delivered without anything like a twist.

A tired old joke on "Backwards" is the closest the band comes to real country, and the mild "Yes I Do" features a watered down Caribbean pulse, but those detours are too slight to qualify as stretches into anything exotic. The set firmly avoids challenging the band's status quo, and is built to appeal to listeners who demand nothing from favorite acts but more of the same. THOMAS KINTNER (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

Iggy, Always a Stooge

The frenetic rock icon re-unites with his original band

RETRO Iggy Pop's seminal band the Stooges released three landmark albums between 1969 and 1973, before Pop went on to a successful solo career. Now, the rock icon is holed up in "a little cottage in the boonies" in Florida writing music with his old band. He expects the album, produced by Steve Albini and Jack White, to appear next year and hopes the Stooges will do a full-blown reunion tour.

You moved from New York City to Miami seven years ago. Do you miss New York?

I go to New York from time to time, and it's really exciting when I go. Miami's never been more than a spit from New York anyway.

Has it changed the past 10 years?

It goes through phases. It seems to be in its prosperous phase right now. A lot of pod people. It's pure pod. Hey, that's OK; I'll swing a little pod.

What's it like writing with the band again?

All the same passions and problems are there, but the problems are more muted. I'm still the showoff that gets all the attention. Everyone has their role. It's pretty much the way it was in high school.

What direction are you going in musically?

We experimented a lot. We could have just started out and sounded like us, but that would have been too easy. We'd get together every two or three months ... and bang out stuff. As time went on it started to sound more and more like us.

Why reunite now?

I'd sort of run out of ideas. I ran through everything... I got to the point where I just threw it open and did a guest-oriented album [2003's "Skull Ring"]. I had resisted a reunion, but when I was putting "Skull Ring" together, the brothers [Stooges Ron and Scott Asheton] were on the road playing Stooges songs. Suddenly they were in sight and in mind. I thought, "If I'm going to try Green Day, why not the original band?"

CALL FROM THE GOVERNOR: The characters on Fox's "Prison Break" can't seem to get out of Fox River, but they are coming to a cell phone near you. The series is spawning a series of teeny spinoffs — "mobisodes" — called "Proof of Innocence."

Enchanted Evening

Reba McEntire lights up an unusual staging of 'South Pacific'

MUSICALS | "Great Performances" (9 p.m., PBS) presents "South Pacific" in Concert From Carnegie Hall, featuring Reba McEntire as Nellie Forbush. Set on a remote island during World War II, the 1949 Rodgers and Hammerstein musical revolves around the love between Nellie, a nurse from Little Rock, Ark., and Emile (Brian Stokes Mitchell), a handsome French plantation owner. Her rapture turns to confusion and doubt when she discovers his previous marriage resulted in a family of mixed-race children. Remarkable for its time, "South Pacific" challenged audiences with topics like racism and Nellie's struggles to balance her feelings of love with long-held provincial prejudices.

This one-night only production of "South Pacific" was taped last spring. It unfolds like an opera rehearsal, with singers holding sheet music in front of them.

Rather than detract from the story, this technique puts the emphasis on the show's glorious songs, including such enduring melodies as "Some Enchanted Evening," "Younger Than Springtime," and "There Is Nothin' Like a Dame." KEVIN McDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Cars

A Peacock On Wheels

The new Lamborghini almost shrieks, 'Look at me! Look at me!'

ROAD TEST | The problem with the new Lamborghini Gallardo Spyder — an exercise in visual villainy, a brutal cubist collage of wings and scoops and louvers to which environmentally sensitive people react like roaches sprayed with Raid — is, of course, it's too subtle.

Why else would Lambo paint such a car a hue known as "Verde Picus"? Whatever it is, it sounds positively pastoral, but in real life the color is like irradiated tennis balls or tree frogs left overnight in a blender. Perhaps it's a form of subliminal suggestion. This is the only sense in which the Lambo could be considered green.

Verde Picus is one of two special colors offered to celebrate the 2007 Spyder, the new open-cockpit version of the Gallardo coupe. The other is called Celeste Phoebe, an outrageous shade of baby blue.

With all respect to the automaker's color stylists, the car is plenty noticeable enough. Impossibly low, implausibly wide and comprising more angles than Euclid's "Elements," the Spyder hovers just above the road like some unholy aluminum planchette. What awaits my driver's license, oh asphalt Ouija Board? R-E-V-O-C-A-T-I-O-N.

This car screams to be noticed. Drive past a tennis court and all balls-in-play bounce to the fences while stunned players gawk.

The vorpal-bladed Lambo Spyder goes snicker-snack, that's for sure. Is it right for you? Are you loud and abrasive, a showoff, even a little obnoxious? Are you pathologically gregarious? Do you need attention like nobody's business?

If so, this is a car, and a color, for you. DAN NEIL (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Spawn of The Donald climbing the ladder at dear Dad's business

Donald Trump hand picks apprentices on his television series, but the true apprentices — the ones destined to lead the Trump Organization — have much closer ties to the boardroom.

Donald J. Trump Jr., 28, and Ivanka M. Trump, 24, are carving out a role in their famous father's real estate business.

On the 26th floor of Trump's Fifth Avenue headquarters, Ivanka and Donald Jr. have been learning from their father.

"They are formidable," Trump said. "They will promulgate the brand throughout the world."

The siblings are positioning themselves to run the company one day. "That's the intention," Ivanka says. "Ultimately, it's a family business."

But it hasn't been the straightest of paths to the family business for Donald Jr. and Ivanka.

Donald Jr. graduated from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, but spent time as a ski bum in Colorado prior to joining his father about five years ago.

Ivanka, too, decided to do something a little different after attending Wharton. She worked for New Jersey Nets owner Bruce Ratner on a massive retail development.

Ivanka took the suggestion of Peter D. Linneman, a professor, to go out and prove she could succeed on her own merits.

About a year ago, Ivanka left Ratner. Today, she travels the country, inspecting property and sifting through business pitches.

YOU'RE HIRED: Donald Trump Jr. and sister Ivanka recently joined the family firm.

Jr. say there are advantages in having the same last name as the boss. When people negotiate with them, they know the children have Trump's attention.

They can also challenge their father forcefully at times. They respect him, but they're not intimidated by his outsized personality.

"There's an openness we can have with him," Ivanka said.

If their father makes a decision and the children disagree, they can step behind closed doors and make their case.

But if Trump takes the advice and it's wrong, "you'll never hear the end of it," Donald Jr. says.

Soon, another Trump will join the business. In the fall, Eric, 21, a Young Trumps, Towering

Her title is vice president of development, but she plays it down. "We're not so big on roles," she said. "It's pretty much my father and the rest of the company."

She and her brother have bought into their father's philosophy that they need to earn their keep.

Donald Jr. put it bluntly: "In my father's words, he would fire us like dogs."

Donald Jr. has been with the Trump Organization longer than his sister, starting in 2001. Two years later, he began renovating a building, eventually overseeing the project. He's still with the company as Trump's executive vice president of development and acquisitions.

At the moment, Donald Jr. is running his father's biggest developments in Las Vegas and Chicago.

His most important moment since taking a job with his father came when he formed Trump Mortgage LLC.

This was the first deal the son had finally brought to the company from start to finish. Getting his father to sign off wasn't easy.

"You had to have every answer worked out," Donald Jr. said. "The second you start stammering in front of him, he's got you."

People who have spent time with Trump say he trusts his children. When he opened his books to Forbes magazine to prove his wealth, Trump left his lawyers and children to answer questions.

Despite the pressures of being Trump progeny, Ivanka and Donald senior at Georgetown University, will arrive in New York.

Like Ivanka, Donald Jr. was diplomatic when asked to say who will take the helm when the boss steps down.

He downplayed a sibling rivalry, as did Ivanka, who described her relationship with Donald Jr. as more camaraderie than competition.

That's probably true. But they're also Trumps. "When we want something, we go for it," Donald Jr. said.

"Don't be such a fag."

"Dyke!"

"That's so gay..."

"Queer!"

"Hey faggot!"

sometimes the loudest statement is silence

Today, 500,000 young American students will take part in the 10th national Day of Silence. This event, coordinated by GLSEN, is among the largest student-led actions in American history.

Today's silence gives voice to a crucial truth: 4 out of 5 lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) students say they are harassed at their school. Nearly one-third skip school because they are simply too afraid to go.

GLSEN's national Day of Silence, a collaboration with the United States Student Association, brings attention to those voices — gay and straight alike — which are so routinely silenced by anti-LGBT verbal and physical attacks. As parents, policymakers, educators and community members, we must take action with these young people and ensure that America's schools are safe and effective environments for ALL students.

Lend your voice to the silence — visit www.dayofsilence.org and www.glsen.org.

Boost your bust with new technologies

When it comes to breasts, they are probably the two most important accessories a woman will ever "wear." An integral part of the daily ensemble, the bust requires serious attention, but the truth of the matter is that 70-80 percent of women are victims of wearing the wrong bra for their frame. Recently, many intimate apparel manufacturers are getting brainy on the breast issue, conducting scientific research to uncover new bra technologies that promise everything from better fit, to sleeker design, to ultimate comfort. Leave it to VICTORIA'S SECRET to address all aspects of bra trauma, right down to nipple visibility.

The Nike Revolutionary Support Bra, available in July, is made with breathable fabric and features a front compression strap to keep bouncing to a minimum.

Since launching the Ipex bra, which claimed to be the world's most advanced, Victoria's Secret took the Ipex technology even further, and after two years of research and trials, launched the Ipex Wireless ($42-$44) in February of 2006. The bra is said to ensure "maximum coverage with minimal padding" without the use of a wire, offering support and lift with comfort in mind and no adjustment hassles. For fuller figured women wearing a C cup and above, bras that support bigger cup sizes often fail to support the current fashion trends. Not anymore. New to MAIDENFORM is the Flex-to-Fit bra ($33), promising an inner cup release that sits between the bra's wire and two-way stretch foam. The bra is available up to a size DD and aims to expand and retract where needed, covering all sides and properly shaping the breast. Reasonably priced at $33, it comes in traditional black and white, as well as hot pink for a little added sex appeal.

NIKE, a company known more for its basketball gear than bra technology, has recently launched Nike Performance Underwear Collection, a line devoted to supporting the way a body moves. Available in July, The Nike Revolutionary Support Bra ($70) features adjustable shoulder straps with a unique front compression strap that acts as harness for motion control of the breast, meaning optimal movement with minimal bounce. Away with one-size-fits-all and ill-fitting bras of the past; it's time to invest in a bra that passes the tech-test.

If the possibility of looking at Andy Roddick's or Maria Sharapova's butt for hours on end isn't enough to make you want to be a ball person at Wimbledon, there's now a new reason: designer outfits. POLO RALPH LAUREN signed a deal with The All England Club to be the first Official Outfitter of Wimbledon through 2010. He will create the outfits worn by all on-court officials, including chair umpires, line umpires and ball persons (the ball girl is pictured). The outfits are all navy and cream, with accents of Wimbledon purple. The collection will also be available at Ralph Lauren stores and at polo.com later this summer.

We highly recommend gathering the family together, making a big ol' Italian meal and then descending into a carbohydrate-induced coma. Just don't do it using HOT ITALIAN DISH by Victoria Gotti ($28), available today. Not only are the recipes far too simple for anyone but the most basic cook, the between-chapter writings are eye-rollingly stupid, focusing on Gotti's fabulous friends, perfect dinner parties and the time she showed up at a movie premiere completely accidentally. But then George Clooney said he was a big fan of her novels, so yay! k.p.k.

CIA Leaks

Post staff writer DAFNA LINZER was online Tuesday to discuss the firing of CIA officer Mary McCarthy over the leaking of classified information. McCarthy denies she was involved in the leak to The Post. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Was this woman fired for leaking classified information [about alleged secret U.S. prisons in Europe] or for having undisclosed press contacts? If only the latter, then is today's story a retraction or correction of the earlier one?

The CIA maintains that Mary McCarthy was fired for violating a secrecy agreement that she, like all other agency employees, signed when hired. In its response to the dismissal, the agency said in prepared remarks that McCarthy acknowledged contacts with reporters. It also asserted that she disclosed classified information. It doesn't say that she acknowledged disclosing classified information and McCarthy's lawyer says that she didn't, as we reported today. So we don't know exactly what was said and to whom — just that on the issue of disclosing classified information, the two accounts differ. There may be simple explanations for the difference but we don't know what they are. There is much we simply do not know still.

Did the CIA indicate whether they will fire additional staff in the near future? It seems like McCarthy wasn't involved in the serious leaks that triggered the investigation.

The CIA has been mounting an aggressive internal investigation about several stories, including the prisons and domestic surveillance. That's ongoing and if they find others, they could very well fire them too.

What made The Post conclude on Sunday that Mary McCarthy was the leaker? Did The Post just make up the story?

We didn't conclude that Ms. McCarthy was "the leaker" though some other newspapers and reporters did. We said McCarthy acknowledged contacts with reporters, and intelligence officials said among them was Dana Priest, who wrote about the prisons.

You said earlier "we don't know exactly what was said and to whom." That isn't entirely correct. Dana Priest would know the nature of her contacts with McCarthy, and Dana Priest is a Washington Post reporter. Why can't she just tell us? What are the ethics on this?

The compact reporters enter into with sources for information that they wouldn't get otherwise is often one of confidentiality, especially on issues of national security. That is the pact that Dana entered into with her sources.

I WAS SURPRISED to see a doctored image of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on the cover of Tuesday's Express. Generally I consider advertisements to be the appropriate location for using Photoshop to combine various images and illustrations. Factual news articles are usually paired with similarly factual photographs. I did not see an explanation for the imagery chosen, can you explain the choice?

—ERIN WEBER
Rosslyn, Va.

Editor's Note: We received a number of letters about this. The picture, though visually confusing, was not doctored in any way. Ahmadinejad was photographed at a press conference during which he stood in front of an elaborate backdrop, creating the illusion that he was part of the scene behind him.
